

SEVEN DEATHS

Synopsis

Could an unanswered call result in the death of six people in minutes and five families in years? Ethan was willing to do anything to save the girl he loved. But he didn't think that it would go this far.

Ethan's girlfriend Susan is a patient waiting for a heart transplant. Knowing that her time is running out, Ethan decides to take action to find a heart. He looks for people to sacrifice, who are the same age as his girlfriend and have the same physical features. He finds himself a series of so-called girlfriends and makes them go through some tests. There are two options after getting the results: to live or to die. The most important factor to determine the result is how much the person deserves to love and be loved in return. Not wanting to take away the chance to love and be loved from the many people he meets, Ethan lets them live by breaking up with them with various excuses. Finally, he finds someone that deserves nothing that is good or beautiful. Ethan's victim Jenny falls asleep to get her heart removed cluelessly after a dinner that was pleasant for her but pretty frustrating for Ethan. Scaring Susan's doctor with a threat that he could never fight about, Ethan persuades the doctor to remove Jenny's heart and make the transplant for Susan. The operation for the removal of Jenny's heart begins in the mini surgery that he set up at his house, which they had the dinner together. Even though the doctor begs Ethan to stop this madness that would end Jenny's life, he knows that he has to destroy someone else's life in order to save his little boy's. The doctor's little boy is locked in a place of which only Ethan knows the location. There is a countdown clock in the room his son is at. The room will be filled with gas if the doctor still hasn't removed the heart before the countdown ends. Watching his son and the countdown from the monitor, the doctor finishes the operation and removes Jenny's heart. Ethan's plan is to stop the countdown in the little boy's room and to start another clock to transfer the heart to Susan. However, Ethan's phone starts ringing before stopping the first countdown. It's Susan's mother and she has called to give the news about Susan's death. Losing himself with the death of Susan, Ethan kills himself with a gun he has with him. The doctor sees the lifeless body of Ethan fall on the floor and knows that no one can do anything for his son. He desperately watches the countdown end and his son die. Then takes Ethan's gun and ends his own life. Right around the same time, Susan's mother goes up to the roof of the hospital and lets herself fall into the void.

During the dinner Ethan and Jenny was having together, a girl near Susan's hospital commits suicide. It is found out that this girl has no one, she is an organ donor and she is a match for Susan. But the hospital cannot reach Susan's doctor as he was gagged and tied up in Ethan's home at that time. The transplant hasn't been made and Susan, who has been barely hanging on, loses her life. The girl who killed herself is called Andrea. Andrea was one of the girls that Ethan had tested before Jenny. Ethan left Andrea as she successfully passed the test but Andrea couldn't handle this and killed herself.

Andrea losing Ethan, Ethan losing Susan, the mother losing her daughter and the doctor losing his son... They become lonely after losing the only person they care about in life and cannot find the will to go on and kill their selves. But where are the doctor's wife, the mother's husband, Ethan's parents, Andrea and Jenny's parents? These families have encountered each other sometime in the past and caused the death of some family members. When the remaining people from their family come together, clueless of what happened in the past, they cause each other's deaths. This seemingly coincidental chain of events that has been ongoing for years and causing the end of five families enables the heart to be transferred to a surprise person. Destiny sometimes takes the wheel!
